

Here's a little reminder that being in the question is where the magic is:

What if you were the best looking person in the world?

What if you were the most famous person in the world?

What if you had all the money you could ever need?

What if you could lift 1,000 pounds with just your pinkie?

What if there really is a Hell?

What if there really is a Heaven?

What if alligators wore shoes?

What if the Sun revolved around the Earth?

What if cars could fly?

What if you could choose your child's occupation when they were born?

What if you started school in college and worked your way up to kindergarten?

What if life really were a box of chocolates?

What if kangaroos could talk?

What if everyone in the world did not take a bath or shower for a week?

What if trees could walk (or talk)?

What if diamonds were a man's best friend?

What if America had a King (doesn't it...now?)? (Or Switzerland?)

What if everything in a candy store was free?

What if milk shakes made you thin, and broccoli made you fat?

What if you took a chance and stepped outside your comfort zone?